SN

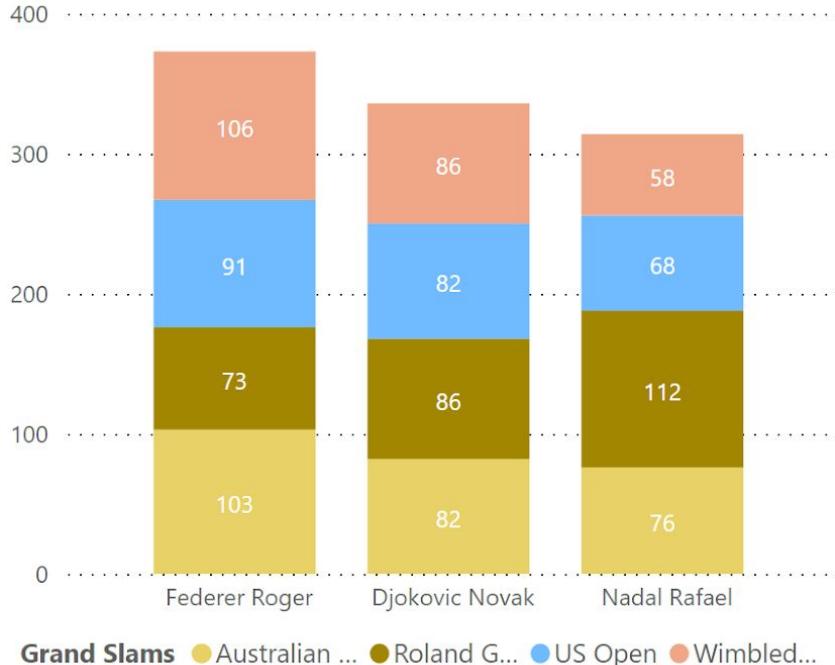

In tennis, the term Grand Slam refers to the accomplishment of winning all four major championships-the championships of Australia, France, Britain (Wimbledon), and the United States-in the same calendar season.

We can see that Federer has both the grand slam match wins and the grand slam title wins. You might also notice that the majority of Nadal's title wins come from one tournament which is Roland Garros. This is due to the fact that Roland Garros is the only grand slam played on clay surfaced courts, and Nadal is known as "the King of Clay".

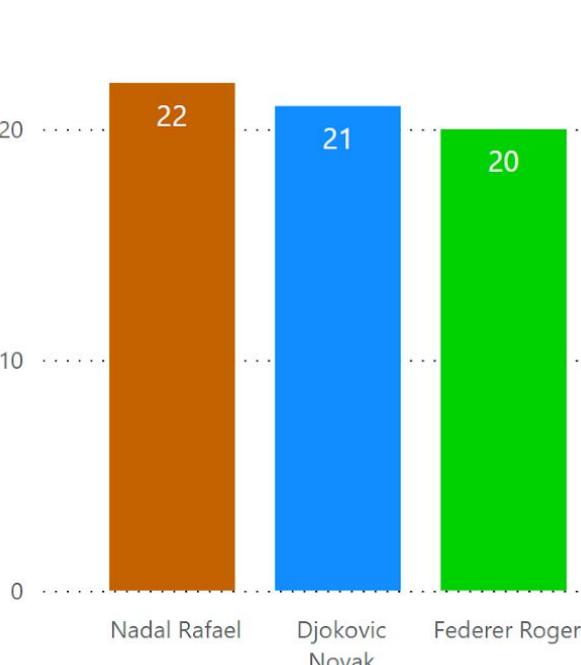

From the mentioned line graphs, we can see that all three players are evenly matched in terms of average wins per year, though Djokovic leads in terms of average wins per year.

*Note that some error may be caused by injuries and the fact that each player's first professional year wasn't a full year.

Number of ATP Titles per Year

This section will track each player's overall performance throughout the entire ATP tour, including Grand Slams.

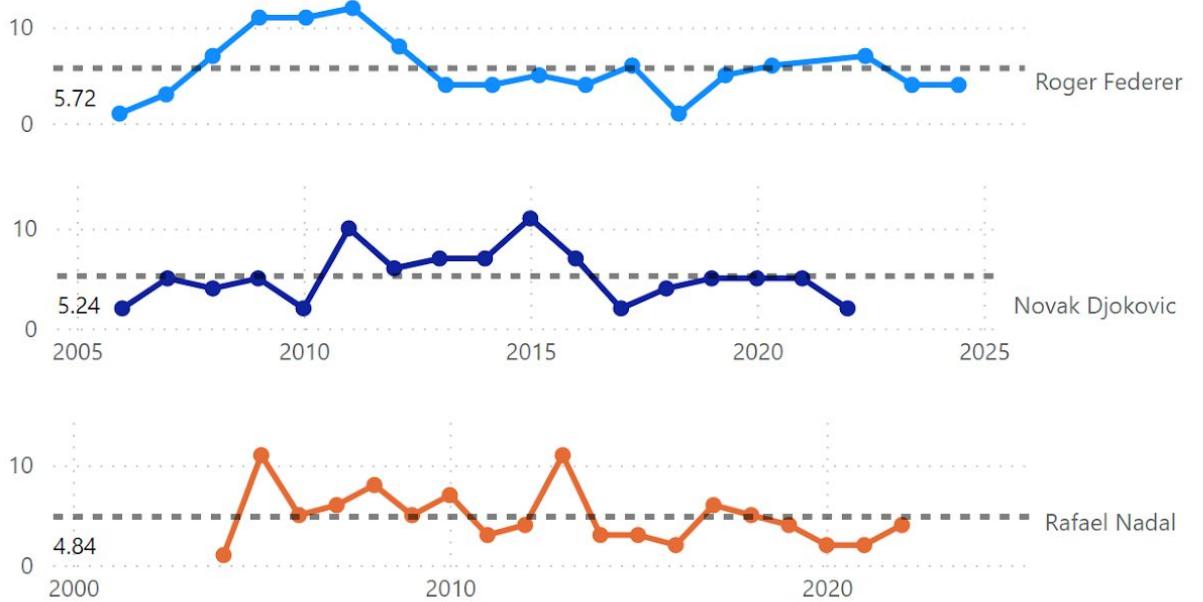

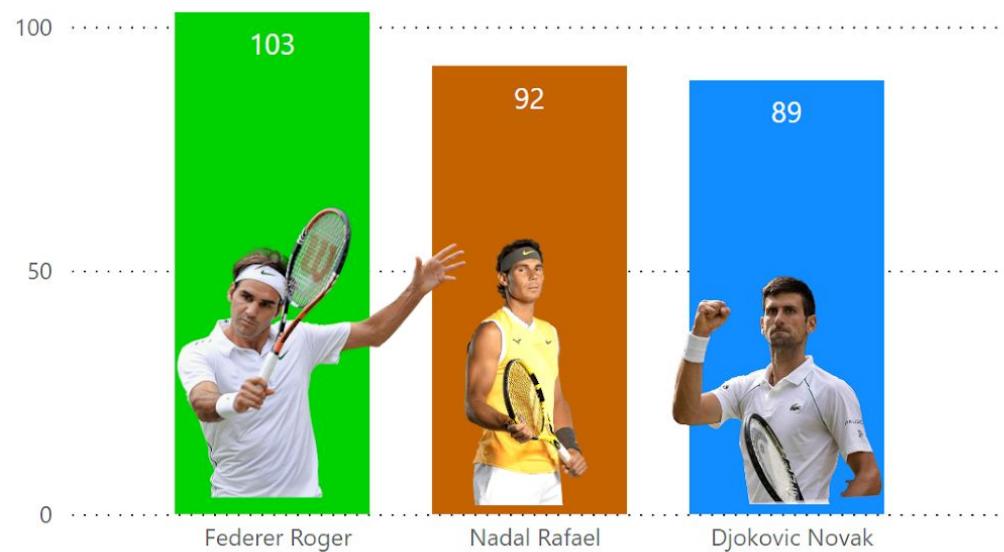

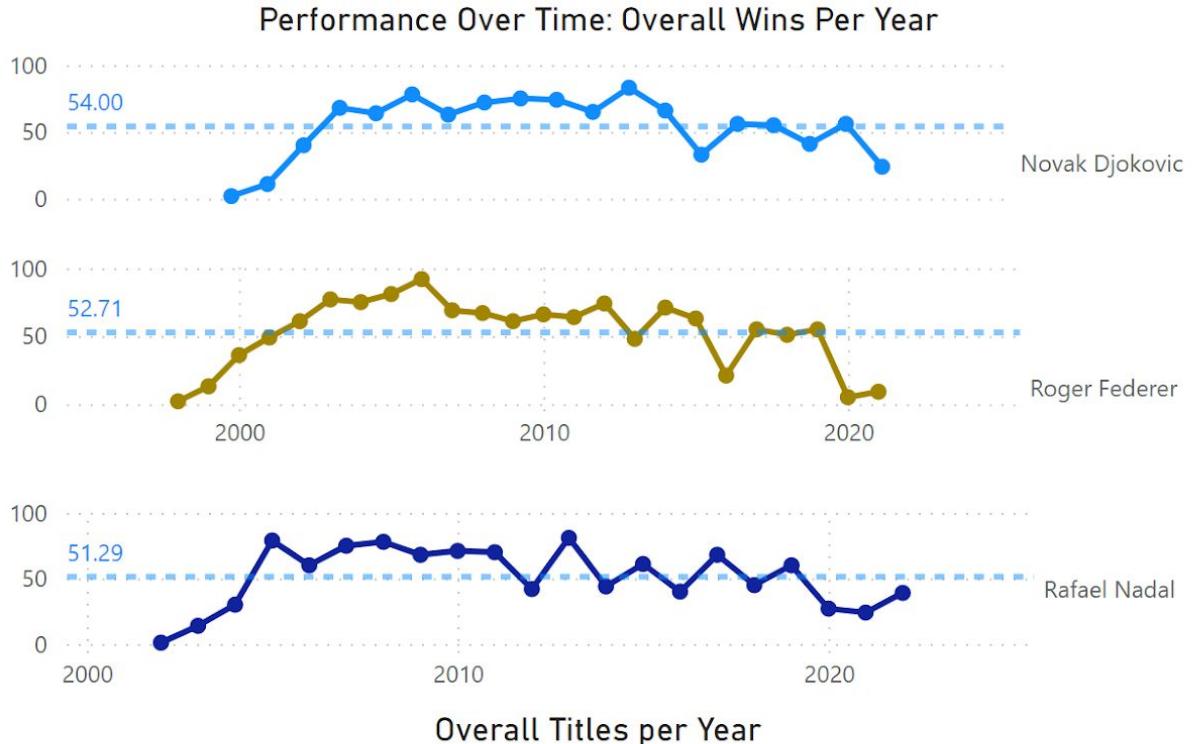

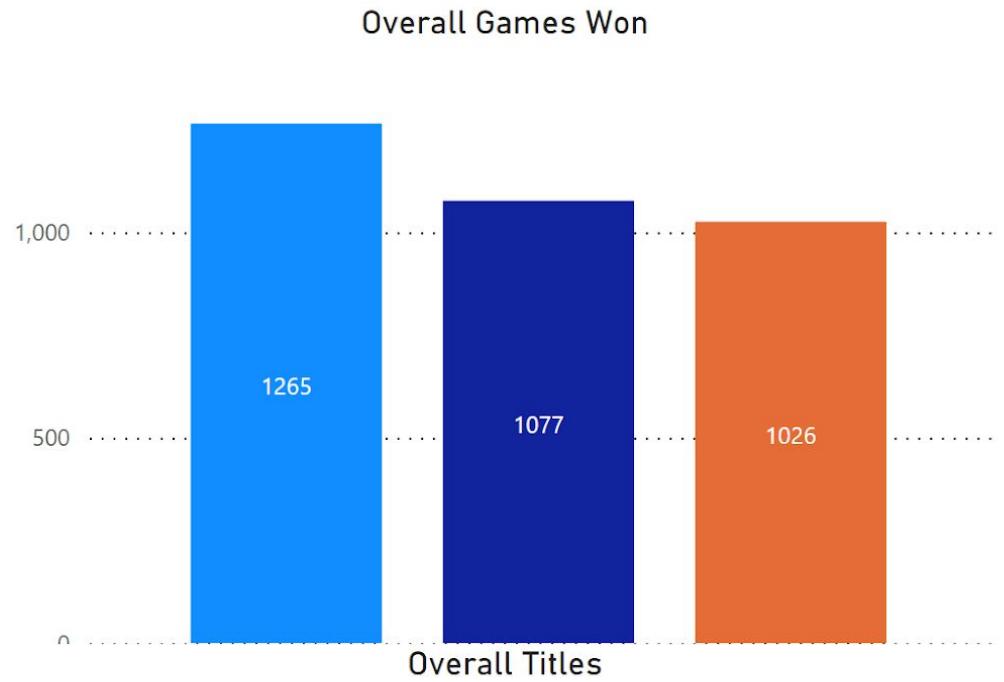

Similarly, to the corresponding Grand Slam statistics, Federer leads in terms of total number of wins and titles.

In the total ATP stats(2002 - 2022), Federer also leads in terms of the average number of ATP match wins per year and essentially ties Djokovic and Nadal in ATP titles per year.

This would tell us that Federer is a stronger overall ATP player than Grand Slam player in relation to Djokovic and Nadal.

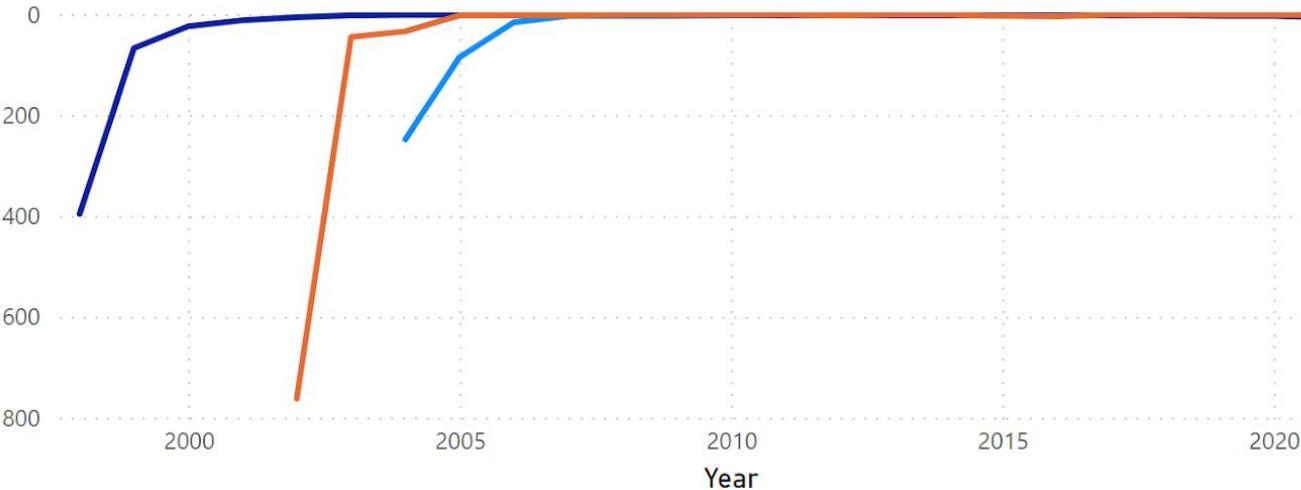

We can also see that Nadal leads Djokovic in total ATP match wins whereas he trails Djokovic in total Grand Slam match wins.

Again, note that some error may be caused by injuries and the fact that each player's first professional year wasn't a full year.
